Newspaper men do not deny the need and the value of a code of ethics, however much they may differ as to just what it should contain, how it should be formulated, how it should be enforced. Some may believe that an unwritten code with professional opinion behind it will suffice. If the acid test of a profession is its possession of a code of ethics enforced by a strong organization, then journalism is not a profession. More and more, however, newspaper men refer to their vocation as a profession and to themselves as journalists, and more and more they are agitating for a set of rules of conduct. In their publications and in their speeches, newspaper men are discussing ethical questions as they pertain to their own methods. Individual newspapers have set up codes, and newspaper men have written creeds which are in effect codes. Every decent newspaper has a more or less definitely formulated declaration of moral precepts for the members of its staff, but the need is increasingly felt that such shadowy substitute is not enough. Noah Porter said: That the judgments of men concerning the right and the wrong of particular actions are very largely the products of...
