Outskirts Press, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .An ancient proverb goes: It takes both sunshine and rain to make a rainbow. In a sense this book is an autobiography of a young man who experienced sunshine and rain throughout life that ended up at the end of a rainbow. The story spans ten years, from early teens to young adulthood, and relates the author's perception of the world around him. He was wet behind the ears during the advent of the Cold War and the accompanying Red Scare; however, vivid memories of this period survived intact and are worthy of sharing. This journal takes the reader back to an interesting and unique time through accounts of unusual personal experiences, some stranger than fiction. At times some historical facts from various sources have been inserted to help buttress statements. Hopefully this book will assist others to live vicariously an exciting decade of history, 1945 to 1955. President Truman presided over the national turmoil after WWII. Racism reared its ugly head again. Everyone was looking under their bed and in the closets for communists. These two themes will be covered thoroughly in this book. Yet, the era also saw soldiers returning home from the war, restored family life, the baby boom underway and more sought-after consumer items were beginning to reappear on the grocery shelves. Moreover churches seemed to be revitalized and the pews were being filled again with attentive worshipers. Church attendance for Christians was placed as high as 74 . Most of us after WW II enjoyed rock and roll music, checked out new car models, viewed movies from our cars at drive-in theatres and visited friends parked in the stalls of drive-in restaurants. In the postwar 40...
