Receipt of goods and a descriptive list thereof; giving the number of packages, weight, and classification. 2. Names of Shipper, Consignee, Carrier, and Shipping Agent. 3. Place and destination of shipment, together with date. 4. Freight rates and other charges and prepayments thereof. Comparison of Straight and Order Bill of Lading.--As previously stated, when goods are shipped straight, the consignee can often obtain the goods without the bill of lading, and then refuse to pay the bill; or the consignee may fail to claim the goods, in which case, if perishable, they may become valueless. On the other hand, goods shipped on order overcome these disadvantages in that the purchaser cannot obtain the goods until the amount of the bill has been collected. Where the goods are perishable, an utter loss can be prevented by directions to the holder of the original bill to sell them in open market if the consignee does not claim them within a reasonable time. Or, if the goods are not perishable, the railroad may be instructed to ship the goods back to the shipper. Disposition of Vouchers.-- We noted above that the Interstate Commerce Commission prescribed three vouchers for both the straight and order bills of lading. These vouchers are: 1. Original Bill of Lading. 2. Shipping Order. 3. Memorandum. These are disposed of as follows: The shipping clerk of the shipper makes out the original bill of lading, at the same time making carbon copies of the shipping order...
