Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Message From Patmos It seems desirable to state in the beginning that this exposition of The Revelation seeks to present the obvious meaning of the Apocalypse as it appears in the text taken at its face value, including its many references to other parts of the Scriptures. We have not tried to force the book into the molds of any theory; but to ask, what does the book say and what does it evidently mean? In the pursuit of this purpose we have been led to pass criticism upon the premillennial view of the Apocalypse. We trust such criticism has not been unduly pressed; but since the view in question is somewhat prevalent at the present time, and is backed with a considerable literature it has received more than a passing notice in the present volume. This statement is made because the writer desires to disclaim antagonism to the premillennialists for whom he entertains a very high regard and whom he counts as his friends. For while the writer dissents from that particular doctrine he stands firmly by and with the premillennialist in his defense of the integrity, authority and inspiration of the holy Scriptures; and would define himself as a postmillennial fundamentalist. The writer acknowledges indebtedness to a variety of sources; among others to Archdeacon Farrar, in his various works on the New Testament. Professor William Milligan, in the Expositors Bible Series. The Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia. The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, - James Orr. David Keppel, The Book of Revelation not a Mystery. David Brown, The Structure of the Apocalypse; rather vague and sketchy. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of...
