Them Cubs, they ain t gonna win no more. When two members of Frain s army of ushers heard those infamous words back in 1945, they had no idea it was Murphy the Goat who had placed the curse on the Cubs, and not Billy Sianis. As it was, the Chicago Cubs had not been to a World Series since 1945. Many believed, and were right that it was due to the Billy Goat Curse. Unbeknownst to Cub fans there was only one way to break the curse - someone working at Wrigley would have to apologize to Murphy for the being thrown out during the fourth game of the 1945 World Series. The biggest issue against Murphy ever getting an apology is he has been dead for many years. In the spirit of Fair play, Murphy the Goat, armed with the gift of speech is forced back to Earth to lift the curse. In exchange for lifting the curse all Murphy wants is an apology for the insult of being thrown out of Wrigley during the fourth game of the 1945 World Series. Needing earthly assistance, Murphy goes to the modern day Billy Goat Tavern in...
