That is to say, he became conspicuous by being too inconspicuous. The neutral, almost sad-colored clothes, hat, and necktie would surely have aroused suspicion in the sort of person for whom they were donned when taken in connection with the keen, alert-eyed face of their wearer. The guard patrolling his little section of sidewalk on either side of the gate was not such a person. Consequently he was surprised when he saw the badge, whose silver plating flashed momentarily in the last rays of sunlight. This badge was shown in lieu of a pass. There was no war for America as yet, but the navy yard harbored secrets as well as warships - sometimes the two...
