It is a work intensely human and full of interesting experiences, stories, and lessons for life, the delight in the telling of which is unfortunately marred by the fact that you must necessarily speak of yourself and your own work, which is sometimes difficult without being offensive, no matter how unintentional it may be. These stories of the juvenile court afford after all the best insight into the character, method and results of its administrative work. I hope some day to tell them, and in the telling there will also appear the failures, the disappointments, the faults and mistakes that come to all of us in any good work. The test of success is: Is it better than the old criminal court system?--not how many children it corrects or fails to correct. The Boy and The Court Our probation system has Ito Probation substantially the good there Offiar. is in the children s institution and at the same time avoids some of its difficulties (rather than evils). We retain the child in his home and his school, and yet have much the same surveillance over him. For instance, all schoolboys in our court report every other Saturday. The report consists of a card from the teacher stating conduct and school attendance. If the boy fails to return to school, he knows that the principal has been supplied with the list of probationers, that the fact will be immediately telephoned to the clerk at the...
