Authorhouse. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 260 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 5.9in. x 0.7in. In his English grandmothers apartment in Berlins Old West the writer heard Neville Chamberlains voice coming through the radio, telling the world, Peace in Our Time. Walking with his cousin York along the fashionable Tauentzienstrasse the morning after Crystal Night, York kept him from picking up some jewelry intending to put it back in a stores broken display: Dont you see the SA men You dont want to mess with those guys. At the railroad station of the Olympic village of Garmisch-Partenkirchen he was part of a contingent welcoming Rudolf Hess, not long before Hitlers deputy flew to Scotland. During the writers stay in a boarding school, the Gauleiter came to visit. An upperclassman had pasted a Hitler stamp on the wall, his idea for the recommended Hitler portrait. He and his aunt Lindy were in a review theater on Berlins Kurfuerstendamm, when a news bulletin came through that an attempt had been made on the Fuehrers life. But to the author and his friends Lunceford and Basie records were more important, and so was their poker club. Most wars cannot be comprehended in isolation. The Second World War is a prime example. The author goes back to the First World War and its origins. His father, whose diplomatic career began in 1914 in Japan and America, provided essential information, particularly about Americas entry into the war. The first war cast a very dark shadow across the entire twentieth century and, it is beginning to look like it, the time beyond. Among its immediate consequences was the emergence of extremist parties, leading in Germany to the Hitler government and the critical Empowerment Law. Even so, there were several opportunities of avoiding the worst, and when the second...
