CHAPTER VII RECENT ADVANCES AND THE PRESENT STATE OF KNOWLEDGE CONCERNING THE MODIFICATION OF THE GERMINAL CONSTITUTION OF ORGANISMS BY EXPERIMENTAL PROCESSES INTRODUCTION Through inheritance there comes the rhythmic repetition in each specific organic form of a precise and definitely repeated series of events ending in the production of an individual which in time sets free from itself a highly organized and specific mass--a gamete, which, when properly combined with some other gamete and nurtured, repeats again the series of events which took place in the parent bodies which preceded them. Throughout all of this complex, rhythmic process a material basis, the germ plasm, keeps intact from parent to progeny genetic lines of descent. This continuity of material basis--first clearly recognized by Gustav Jaeger, and later woven by Weismann into his germ-plasm theories--while known in its gross appearance and many of its behaviors, is nevertheless quite unknown as regards its real constitution and the means through which it does reproduce so accurately in each generation the sequence of events characteristic of its specific organic form. The purely a-priori hypotheses of the constitution of this substance in reality help us little or not at all as a basis for experimental investigation. The id-determinantbiophore fabric of Weismann, Naegeli's micellae chains, DeVries pangene complex are no better and perhaps no worse than the hypothesis that racial memory is the basis of inheritance, or that the complex or harmonious equipotential systems of Driesch explain the phenomena....
