Wipf Stock Publishers, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Why do we die? Why will your life eventually come to an end, even without fatal injury or illness? As far as any of us stop to ponder this question, two alternative answers are common. Either we, and all living things, die because something has gone wrong since human life first came into being, or we die because all living things die in evolutionary and generational succession. The first of these answers is a widespread Christian one based on an understanding of the Fall. The second is the picture given by science. The Dawn of Death charts a course between these two answers as to why we die. It examines in depth the Bible passages and the science that lie behind them. The author draws a carefully considered conclusion and reflects on how this fits within Christian belief. Why do we die? Simon Howard answers this question from a variety of independent perspectives in this tightly written exploration of death. He delves into palaeoanthropology, biology, and psychology, and includes extremely helpful exegesis of key texts in the Hebrew Bible and the New Testament. This is a bold piece of focused scholarship that sets a clear agenda for further work on death. --Bethany Sollereeder, Faculty of Theology and Religion, University of Oxford If you are looking for a book that s careful to push all the traditional buttons and that beats a deafening drum for literalism, put this book down. But if you want a well qualified and patient tutor to walk you through the scenarios on death in our species, from fossils to Genesis to Romans, and how these understandings might relate to each other theologically--this is what you re looking for....
